About the show: “The Dixie Swim Club”

Type of comedy: Comedy Drama

Plot: Every year, the members of a girl’s college swim team rent the same cottage on the famed Outer Banks in North Carolina. The ladies are some of the funniest you will ever meet as they reminisce and catch up on each others’ lives over a span of thirty years. These women are like good wine; we see them age and change, yet sometimes never change. It’s a beautiful story of friendship that no one should miss.

Situations: The play is full of funny, lovely and touching situations. The girls talk frankly about life, love, their bodies, aging and men, but all in good humor. The situations will leave you laughing hysterically and gasping for air!

Language: When the ladies get together, they say what’s on their minds. There is a bit of cussing, but nothing that would get you kicked out of the PTA!

We think this play is suitable for: All men who want to know what women talk about when they get together, and all women who like to talk about things when the men aren’t around! Any ages, from teens to seniors, will love this show.

We think you should avoid this play if: You can’t tolerate any language at all, or if you would be embarrassed by the ladies’ frank talk.

If this were a movie, it would be rated: PG-13
